

Rules of Copyright on the Article Published in “The Northeast Asian Economic Review”

The Copyrights on the article published in “The Northeast Asian Economic Review” shall be handled in accordance with these Rules while the writing of such article shall be regulated separately by the writing rules, rules for contributions and other relevant rules.

1. Ownership of the copyright

The copyright on the article published in “The Northeast Asian Economic Review” (hereinafter referred to as the “Article”) shall belong to the author.

2. The followings shall be agreed to by the author.

- (1) The Article shall be published exclusively as an article of “The Northeast Asian Economic Review”.
- (2) The Editorial Committee of “The Northeast Asian Economic Review” (hereinafter referred to as the “Editorial Committee”) may reproduce the Article as part of other publications published by ERINA (including electronic version thereof) after giving notice to and obtaining consent from the author.
- (3) The Editorial Committee may disclose the Article in an outside academic website to which ERINA furnishes data after two (2) years from the day on which such Article is issued.
- (4) A third party may reproduce the Article in printed, electronic or other media for personal and nonprofit purposes.
- (5) Excerption or search service agencies may use bibliographic descriptions of the Article and introduction of the author for their database.
- (6) The author shall not be allowed to disclose the Article electronically in his/her own or other’s website within two (2) years from the day on which “The Northeast Asian Economic Review” concerned is published.

3. Warranty for the Article

- (1) The author warrants to the Editorial Committee that the Article does not infringe any copyright or any other right of a third party.
- (2) The author shall, if the author’s Article contains a quotation from the article of other person which exceeds fairly accepted volume of quotation, obtain approval from the original author of such article and warrants that the original author has given consent to the above Sections 2(1) to 2(4). The same shall be applicable to the case in which the author uses in the author’s Article charts, graphs or photographs on which the other person has copyright.
- (3) If the author uses texts on which the other person has copyright as derivative works such as translations and adaptations, the author shall obtain approval from the original author in connection with the rights of translation and adaptation.

4. Derivative use of the Article

If the author uses the Article published in “The Northeast Asian Economic Review” derivatively in other printed matters, the author shall notify the Editorial Committee thereof in advance.

5. The author shall submit a form of consent and warranty (as per the attached form) to the Editorial Committee in order to confirm the above Sections 2 and 3 at the time when it is decided that the article is published in “The Northeast Asian Economic Review”. The Article may be published on condition of signature to the form of consent and warranty.

6. Any doubt relating to the copyright on the Article shall be consulted with the Editorial Committee.