

The Present Situation and Future Tasks for the Internationalization of Agriculture in Heilongjiang Province, China

ZHANG, Fenglin
Associate Professor,
Northeast Asia Research Institute, Heilongjiang Provincial Academy of Social Sciences

Summary

The internationalization of agriculture is an inevitable result of the participation of agriculture in the international division of labor. As a leading granary of China, Heilongjiang Province is one of the country's major grain production bases, as well as commodity grain production bases, and thus has the basis and advantages for the internationalization of agriculture. In recent years, both the agricultural output and trade of Heilongjiang Province have been increasing year by year, and the agricultural cooperation with other countries and regions has also been gradually deepening. In the context of the internationalization of agriculture, Heilongjiang Province faces the important future tasks of making the most of its advantages and accelerating internationalization. This paper will analyze the basis for the internationalization of agriculture in Heilongjiang Province, the current situation and the problems for foreign agricultural trade, and then examine the ideas on and measures for the province's internationalization of agriculture.

[Translated by ERINA]