

China's Opening-Up to the Outside World and Northeast Asian Regional Economic and Trade Cooperation (Summary)

SHEN Minghui

Researcher, National Institute of International Strategy, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences

KONG Dapeng

Graduate Student, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences

China's reform and opening-up has already become a path of close to 40 years, from 1978 to today. China's opening-up to the outside world, amid the process of forward movement in promotion and exploration in step-wise fashion, has continued to give out unabated vitality in the cause of dramatic economic growth. The Northeast Asian region is an important gateway in China's opening-up to the outside world, and the China–Japan–ROK FTA, subregional cooperation, and the China–Mongolia–

Russia Economic Corridor are key points of Northeast Asian regional cooperation. The potential for Northeast Asian cooperation is great, but it is also facing obstacles of differing degree. The furthering of Northeast Asian regional cooperation takes economic and trade cooperation as its breakthroughs, seeks advantageous crossover points in all areas, and must continue proactively advancing steady cooperation at all levels.

[Translated by ERINA]